

ABSTRACT

A method for separating difluoromethane from a mixture of said difluoromethane and at least one impurity, said method comprising extractively distilling said mixture using dichloromethane as the extractive agent to recover a product stream of purified difluoromethane having a concentration of said impurity lower than that of said mixture.